Volume 31 Issue 12 City Park Radio 96.5 & 103.7 FM Launceston December 2017

The Misadventures of Agnetha Deveaux is a new fantasy mystery series coming to City Park Radio in December. A freelance elf investigator fights fearsome beasts, solves tricky murder cases and stands up for the little people in this six part series. It is written and produced by Royce Pentaghast with an "all-star" local cast recorded in the studios of City Park Radio. The series will be broadcast on Sundays at 1030am from December 3, with a repeat broadcast on Thursdays 4pm. Congratulations to Royce and the team for bringing something new to the City Park Radio airwaves.

Reelin' in the Years

Classic Album

PARCEL OF ROGUES

Steeleye Span

Parcel of Rogues released in 1973 is the 5th album by British folk rock band Steeleye Span. It was their most successful album thus far, breaking into the Top 30 in the UK.

The album grew out of a theatrical project the band undertook, a version of Robert Louis Stevenson's "Kidnapped". The book and play were set against the backdrop of the Scottish Jacobite movement, and in the course of developing the play, the band came across a considerable amount of 18th century Scottish poetry that they mined for the album.

The title of the album derives from a line in the song "Rogues in a Nation" which is a poem by Robert Burns. "Alison Gross" and "One Misty Moisty Morning" are probably the best known tracks on the album.

The use of drums, driven in part by Rick Kemp's background in rock is a feature of the album. The drums took the band further in the direction of rock, as demonstrated by "The Wee Wee Man" and "Cam Ye O'er Frae France." After the album was released, the band undertook a US tour, opening for Jethro Tull.

In 1974 Ian Anderson produced their next album "Now We Are Six". "Parcel Of Rogues" is a stand out album of folk rock from Steeleye Span.
